

Digital Learning Internship

Digital Learning Internship

Have you ever wished that your science class would happen in the lab with a real scientist to learn from? Do you love to talk about nerdy things and dream about making videos or comics to share with more people?

The Digital Learning Internship can be your first step to a STEM career or creative calling. Teens who are selected will learn science from an expert every day and practice explaining what they learned in video, drawings, and photos.

Teen Volunteers

Teen Volunteer Program

Our teen volunteers are current high school students who are outgoing, adaptable, and love learning about the world around them.

Teen volunteers do everything from facilitating guest interactions to assisting in the play lab, with plenty of exploration of the sciences mixed in-between.

To learn more, you can check out the teen volunteer page or email teens@fieldmuseum.org.

Teen Storytelling Collective

Teen Storytelling Collective

Teens will examine how various different cultures showcase their stories and draw connections between their own experiences and those of others.

Participants will reflect on their own cultural experiences and create a graphic novel cover highlighting their own cultural stories.
